

MIDWEST
FOODS

RECALL: Jif Peanut Butter is Voluntarily Recalled Due to Salmonella Outbreak Investigation

Midwest Foods IS Involved in This Recall

May 24th, 2022

J.M. Smucker Co, is recalling certain Jif Brand Peanut Butter products in connection with a salmonella outbreak investigation. To identify affected product, please follow the steps recommended by the FDA below:

Consumers, restaurants, and retailers should not eat, sell, or serve any recalled Jif brand peanut butter.

Follow these steps:

Check if you have Jif peanut butter.

Locate the lot code on the back of the jar, under the Best If Used By Date (the lot code may be next to the Best If Used By Date for cups or squeeze pouches).

In the lot code, if the first four digits are between 1274 and 2140, and if the next three numbers after that are '425', this product has been recalled and you should not consume this product. See example.

If you are unsure what to do with your recalled product, you can call or email J.M. Smucker Company for more information:

The J.M. Smucker Co. Hotline: 800-828-9980

Website: jif.com/contact-us

Product Identification

Image Source: FDA.gov

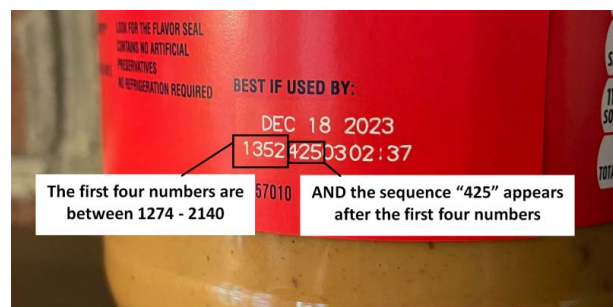

Image Source: FDA.gov

MIDWEST
FOODS

RECALL: Jif Peanut Butter is Voluntarily Recalled Due to Salmonella Outbreak Investigation

Midwest Foods IS Involved in This Recall

May 24th, 2022

Our records indicate that we received the affected peanut butter in a recent shipment. All remaining product in our warehouse has been quarantined according to our safety protocol. Customers who purchased item number: 317212DG Peanut Butter in the past 6 weeks might still have this in stock. Please check your supply of peanut butter for the recalled product and do not serve or consume it.

Follow the FDA and J.M. Smucker's recommendations.

More information about the recall is available at FDA.gov

A full list of UPC Codes is available here

If you have purchased affected product from us, and you have any questions please reach out to Customer Service for assistance.

Once again, Midwest Foods did receive product affected by this recall, and some customers may have this product in their stock. Please check your supply and follow the guidance of the CDC. If you have any questions please reach out to your Business Development Associate or call Customer Service at 773.927.8870